

MORE ABOUT THE FENCE ARTISTS.
Some Adventures in the West.—A Sheriff Outwitted—Long Signs.

The fence artists who work for Kissam & Allen, the proprietors of the New York Advertising Sign Company, have met with many adventures. In the summer of 1877 the wreck of the steamship Rusland lay off Deal beach, near Long Branch. The wreckers had possession of it, and access to it, except by the wreckers, was almost impossible. Nevertheless, seeing the broad iron sides of the steamship, a contract was made to paint on her sides a sign. After several attempts to board the steamship had failed, five artists of the company formed an alliance with the wreckers, and at 1 o'clock in the morning the attempt was made. The sea was running very high, and three times they were beaten back by the breakers. At last a receding wave left a chance, and they succeeded in getting the boat through. In a short time the sign showed out in immense letters along the black iron sides. A reward was offered for the arrest of the men, but nothing ever came out of it.

The proprietors say they have one sign at the junction of the Erie, Midland, and Morris and Essex Railways 955 feet long, two in St. Louis over 500 feet, two in Richmond, Va., 300 feet, one in Pottawatomie, 700 feet, and one in Salem, Oregon, 1,300 feet long.

Three years ago an advertiser located some signs painted on the Post Office building in Nassau street, the building being unoccupied, they said. "This seemed a risky piece of business to paint all over that building, located but a short distance from the Post Office, but the men, but our boys undertook it, and by raising a pretended roof on the corner of Pine street, drew the officers away while others rapidly and neatly decorated the entire surface.

When England was hesitating about the payment of a large sum on the monolith presented them by the Khedive of Egypt, which was to stand at the entrance to the Suez Canal, the New York Advertising Sign Company were quietly engaged in erecting a counterpart of the sign obelisk, now on its way to Central Park, New York, and the only one of its kind in the only up-town advertisement place.

A UPTOWN ADVERTISERS.—A young man, a sharp operator, and a scoundrel, was favored with the third set of teeth when perhaps 80 years old and about a year before his death. I do not think he was an artist, but the old man's teeth were so bad that he could not eat his meal without the help of his wife. She has a sister living, and many nieces and nephews, besides neighborhood friends, who can testify to the certainty of the fact."

Wanted--Females.

A lady writes to THE SUN from Greenboro, N.C., as follows: "My granddaughter, a well-known citizen of Granville County, a remarkably energetic and sly woman, was favored with the third set of teeth when perhaps 80 years old and about a year before his death. I do not think he was an artist, but the old man's teeth were so bad that he could not eat his meal without the help of his wife. She has a sister living, and many nieces and nephews, besides neighborhood friends, who can testify to the certainty of the fact."
